The diagram illustrates a hierarchical menu structure for a video game. It consists of two main rectangular boxes. The left box, labeled '10' with an arrow, is titled 'OPTIONS' and contains four items: 'DISPLAY' (with an empty circle icon), 'SURF: off' (with an empty circle icon), 'COLOR' (with an empty circle icon), and 'FONT' (with a filled circle icon). An arrow labeled '15' points to the 'FONT' item. A line extends from the right side of the 'OPTIONS' box, branching into two lines that point to two separate rectangular boxes on the right. The top-right box, labeled '25' with an arrow, contains three items: 'Small' (with an empty circle icon), 'Medium' (with a filled circle icon), and 'Large' (with an empty circle icon). The bottom-right box, labeled '20' with an arrow, is empty. Arrows labeled '35' and '30' point to the top-right and bottom-right boxes, respectively.
